But the most important difference between an English and a Scottish jury is this: An English jury is the same the belief that the only really when returning their verdict must be unanimous, and they fail to agree after a certain length of time they are dismissed and the whole proceedings are being again de novo before a fresh jury. This is a most expensive mode of administering justice. In civil cases, in order to avoid this result, the litigants sometimes agree to accept the verdict of a majority. In Scotland the jury can always give a verdict by a majority in civil cases after the lapse of three hours.
